

For Purple's hook, the children practiced 'legging.' This process was used during the Industrial Revolution to move canal boats through tunnels. This allowed the children to use their physical skills in order to see how strenuous this challenge was. It also introduced them to the significance of the canal networks during the Industrial Revolution.